$8.5M OK'd For Special Ed Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday approved plans to purchase a 53,000-square-foot office building in Wollaston and convert it into a new special education center that could accommodate nearly 300 students with autism from pre-kindergarten to grade eight.

Councillors, in a 6-0 vote, approved Mayor Thomas Koch's request to borrow $8.5 million to purchase 180 Old Colony Ave. from Eastern Nazarene College and renovate the space. Councillor Anne Mahoney voted "present" and Councillors Kirsten Hughes and David McCarthy were not at the meeting.

The money approved Monday includes $6.8 million to buy the three-story building and two nearby parking lots with roughly 100 spaces. The remaining $1.7 million will go towards mechanical upgrades and other building improvements, including the installation of a second elevator.

Paul Hines, the director of the city's Public Buildings Department, said an additional $4 to $5 million would be needed in the future to build out the space, including classrooms for students, each of which will have its own bathroom.

Wollaston Proposal Before Board

By SCOTT JACKSON

A plan to construct a mixed-use building with 75 apartments and four storefronts, including one that could possibly house a brewery and restaurant, got a lukewarm reception from area residents who said the proposal is too big and doesn't have enough parking spaces.

Quincy developer Eric Zhang has proposed constructing the building on three parcels of land - 21-29 Beale Street, which is home to five storefronts, including Koi restaurant, formerly Barry's Deli, and 65-67 Chapman Street, both of which have four-family homes on site. The building would be built around Newcomb Farms, which is located on the same block of

Salvation Army Red Kettle Campaign Kick Off

By Capt. AMBER MAYNOR
Corps Officer
Quincy Salvation Army

Many people know the popular phrase, 'every time a bell rings an angel gets its wings.' While we do not know in this life if that saying is true, we do know that every time a Salvation Army bell rings, change turns into changed lives.

The Salvation Army is well-known for the annual Red Christmas Kettle campaign that rolls out each November and runs through Christmas Eve. The Red Christmas Kettle is The Salvation Army's prominent fundraising effort each year. While many people recognize the Red Kettle and partner it with The Salvation Army like peanut butter and jelly, not too many people know what we actually do.

The Salvation Army in Quincy offers a wide variety of programs to help meet physical, emotional, and spiritual needs of individuals and families. Through our social services we offer a free food pantry, rental assistance, clothing vouchers, utility assistance, and we have newly added food delivery to individuals who are unable to come to our building due to health and physical restraints.

We also provide a program called 'Pathway of Hope.' The Salvation Army's Pathway of Hope initiative provides individualized services to families with children who desire to take action to break the cycle of crisis and vulnerability that repeats generation after generation. It seeks to address the root causes of poverty in addition to The Army's history of compassionate serving. By helping families overcome challenges like unemployment, unstable housing, and lack of education, we can lead families down a path toward increased stability and, ultimately, self-sufficiency.

Throughout the week we offer a variety of programs to children and adults to help meet emotional and spiritual needs. Everyone has the innate desire to be loved and to belong, which we at The Salvation Army recognize and diligently strive to make our building and programs 'The Gathering Place'; a place of belonging, love, and acceptance for everyone. Every week we open our doors and hearts to offer the following programs:

Tuesday (4-7 p.m.) ages 4-17:

We offer character building badge programs where the children learn life skills alongside Biblical Truths. We also offer homework help, open gym, drama, and timbrels (also known as tambourines). Free hot dinner provided for all.

We offer a time of open gym for men of various ages, with a structured basketball game. New men welcome anytime and no cost involved.

Thursday (11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m.) women ages 18 & up:

Every Thursday we have a women's group who meets for lunch and a variety of activities. We do a devotional, prayer time, and then change up the program weekly with crafts, games, and even a monthly outing.

Friday (6-7:30 p.m.)

Adults 18 & up:

The first, third and fifth Fridays we offer a program called FED (Fellowship, Eating, and Discipleship) where we feed adults physically and spiritually. We offer a dinner around the table, followed by a time of Bible study and prayer (childcare provided if needed).

The first, third and fifth Fridays we offer adult volleyball that has been going on for over 40 years. A wide variety of ages all the way up to 70s come and participate in this intergenerational program. It is a great way to stay fit during the cold months!

Saturday - monthly (11 a.m. - 1 p.m.) Women ages 18 & up:

We offer a once a month women's gathering called 'Connect.' It is a place for women, ages 18 & up, to come and enjoy brunch followed by a Bible Study, craft, or outing. It is just a few hours to get away and be with other women and to connect to make lasting friendships.

Sunday - (9:45 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.) All ages:

Every Sunday we offer

DOING THE MOST GOOD

Sunday school from 9:45-10:45 a.m. During this time everyone splits into age appropriate fun classes and have a time of digging into the Bible and discussing how it applies to life today.

From 11 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. we have a Holiness Worship service for all ages. It is a time of corporate gathering and worshipping God. We offer a variety of worship through brass and contemporary music, interactive prayer time and prayer requests, Bible based sermons, and a fellowship time of coffee and pastries where we can engage with each other and truly become the 'family of God.' There is a nursery ministry for ages 0-5 and a children's church for ages 5-12.

The Salvation Army's mission statement states that we are "an evangelical part of the universal Christian church. Its message is based on the Bible. Its ministry is motivated by the love of God. Its mission is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and to meet human needs in His name without discrimination." This is what we look to do each and every day at the Quincy Salvation Army - to be 'The Gathering Place' where people can belong and become a changed person because of the various programs that are done out of the love for God.

This year the Quincy Salvation's Red Kettle Campaign has a goal of $135,000. Of this goal 82 cents of every dollar goes back to support our social services and programs listed above and more as needs arise. All of the services, programs, and meals we provide are FREE. We know that making ends meet can be difficult and that many times parents work multiple jobs, so we want to step in

Phelan Mulling Bid For Norfolk County Sheriff

Former Quincy Mayor Would Be Second City Democrat Seeking Party Nomination For Sheriff

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A second Quincy Democrat may be running for sheriff next year.

Former Quincy mayor William Phelan told the Sun he is seriously considering a bid for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County sheriff in 2020. Phelan, if he gets in the race, would be the third Democrat – and the second from Quincy – running for sheriff.

Already announced candidates include fellow Quincy Democrat Patrick McDermott and James Coughlin of Dedham. McDermott is vacating his seat as Norfolk County Register of Probate to run for sheriff. Coughlin is a retired Massachusetts state trooper.

The sheriff's seat is presently held by Republican Jerry McDermott of Westwood. Jerry McDermott was appointed sheriff by Gov. Charlie Baker after the seat was vacated by longtime Sheriff Michael Bellotti. Bellotti, a Quincy Democrat, left the sheriff's job last year to become interim president of Quincy College.

Jerry McDermott – who is not related to Patrick McDermott – says he will be seeking the Republican nomination for sheriff next year.

Candidates running for sheriff in 2020 are seeking to fill the final two years that remain on Bellotti's six-year term. The winner of the 2020 race can run for a full six-year term in 2022.

Phelan says he will decide about a campaign for sheriff in January. He served three terms as mayor of Quincy from 2002 to 2008 and two years as a member of the Quincy School Committee. He also worked several years as town administrator for the Town of Holbrook and is currently a practicing attorney in Quincy.

He said he is drawn to the Norfolk County sheriff's position as a way to help people.

"I am seriously considering running for Norfolk County sheriff as a Democrat next year. I see it as a way to help people," Phelan said in a recent interview. "Public service to me when I was in the mayor's office, what I liked most about it was it was a position that you were able to help people directly. I see the sheriff's office as a place

• On Dec. 5, 1945, five U.S. Navy Avenger torpedo-bombers take off from Florida on a routine three-hour training mission near the Bahamas. Two hours later, the planes disappeared. Mariner aircraft, sent to locate the planes, also disappeared. No trace of the men or aircraft were ever found.

Phelan Mulling Bid For County Sheriff

where you have that opportunity as well – to impact people's lives and I think it's a worthwhile position for public service and I think public service is important.

"I think the reason we are here is to help people who are less fortunate."

Phelan said the majority of inmates in the Norfolk County House of Corrections fall into two categories or both categories: they either suffer from mental illness or often times from addiction or both. "They are sick and suffering like a lot of people are and they haven't had a lot of opportunities like a lot of us have. That's not to say there isn't reason for them to be there – sometime there is, sometimes there isn't – but they are human beings and they should be treated as such. The time that they spend incarcerated should at least as productive as possible."

"The job of a correctional officer is a difficult job and those employees have to be supported and trained properly. It's a changing field. People are looking at incarceration differently now. They see the effects of the opioid epidemic and the public understands there are underlying issues that many people have that they are trying to overcome and if they do and they can they can be productive members of society," Phelan said.

"The position of county sheriff is a position that is very worthwhile and one that you can have an impact on people's lives and I think my skill set would be good for that," he added.

Phelan said he will set up an exploratory committee to help him make a final decision about entering the sheriff's race.

"I am going to seriously consider it," he said.

Phelan, who is 59, will celebrate his 60th birthday on Nov. 26. He and his wife, Tracey, have four adult children: three daughters and a son. The youngest is a sophomore at Amherst College.

"My wife and I are now in a situation where we would have the time to pursue this," Phelan said.

He said his experience with municipal budgets and managerial duties would be an asset as the next Norfolk County sheriff.

"I understand budgets, I understand costs. I have that type of mind. I have that ability and I think there is a component of county sheriff that requires someone who is a manager of sorts to make sure what is being spent and being spent wisely.

"Also, I like to believe that I am someone who is innovative and I can see things from a different perspective. I am not afraid to speak my mind and do things differently if I think things need to be done and looked at differently. I think that's an asset as well.

"I enjoyed being the mayor, there was a lot of pressure in that position. I was younger, the politics of it were new to me at the time but I loved it because I could do things that could help people and that's why I think this position is something that I could help with. I think my desire for public service would be well served in this position for that reason."

As for making a decision about a candidacy for sheriff, Phelan said:

"I still want to put together an exploratory committee and I have begun to do that and I continue to talk to people and see how they feel about my candidacy. I will be making a decision probably at the beginning of the year.

"I have been thinking about for some time and have been talking to my family, especially my wife Tracey. We have talked a lot about this and now I want to see how other folks feel about it."

Historically, Quincy has played a key role in the election of the Norfolk County sheriff. The city is the largest municipality – voting block – in Norfolk County. The last three elected Norfolk County sheriffs hailed from Quincy; two were Democrats and one was a Republican.

The late Charles Hedges, a Quincy Republican, served as Norfolk County sheriff from 1960 to 1975.

The late Clifford Marshall, a Quincy Democrat, served as county sheriff from 1975 to 1996.

Michael Bellotti, also a Quincy Democrat, was sheriff from 1999 to 2018. Bellotti defeated Republican Jack Flood in 1998. Flood had been appointed sheriff after the death of Clifford Marshall in 1996.

The state primary will be held Tuesday, Sept. 15, 2020. Besides the race for Norfolk County sheriff there will be the showdown for U.S. Senate between Democrats Ed Markey and Joseph Kennedy III in the Democratic primary. Markey is the incumbent senator who served as U.S. representative in the 7th District from 1973 before he was elected senator in 2012. Kennedy is vacating his seat as congressman in the 4th District to challenge Markey as the state's junior U.S. senator.

Primary winners will advance to the final election – which is also a Presidential election – on Tuesday, Nov. 3.

We Need Health Care Reforms That Help Patients, Families

By PATRICK J. KENNEDY

This summer, we saw remarkable, bipartisan progress on addressing rising health care costs – an issue voters have consistently ranked as most important.

The challenge for lawmakers right now is twofold: find effective solutions that make health care more affordable for all Americans without reducing access to treatments.

While our health care system often seems like a tangled knot of misaligned incentives and bureaucracy, there are most certainly bipartisan solutions that Congress can implement to achieve this dual goal.

The issue is of particular concern for the mental health community. Millions of Americans confront mental illness each day and approximately one in six use some form of psychiatric medication. And for those battling addiction, medication can sometimes mean the difference between success and failure.

Medication is not a one-size-fits-all solution. Prescriptions must be monitored and adjusted as treatment progresses. It's why organizations such as Mental Health America consistently oppose policies that would restrict access to new medications.

Fortunately, many practical solutions have already been explored and are waiting for a champion to take them over the finish line.

Reforms like passing on some of the rebates in Medicare Part D will realign incentives throughout the whole system to bring down prices -- all while providing actual savings at the pharmacy.

The plan is simple enough -- forcing insurance companies and pharmacy benefit managers (massive private "middlemen" between drug companies and insurers) to pass on drug rebates to patients at the point of sale.

For patients, passing on rebates would provide immediate relief. It is estimated that sharing a portion of rebates with diabetes patients on Medicare could save up to $20 billion over the next 10 years.

Most importantly, this plan addresses the rising cost of prescription drugs.

Currently, pharmacy benefit managers pocket rebates, claiming they spread the cost of drugs throughout premiums and other patient fees. So not only are patients not receiving the savings intended for them, but the cost of medicines are rising.

Pharmacy benefit managers and insurers are incentivized to maximize the number of rebates they can receive. And since rebates are used for the most expensive drugs, this means benefit managers are also incentivized to keep drug prices high -- or steer patients toward high-priced drugs.

Both practices increase costs for families across the nation. Removing incentives would help patients find effective and affordable treatment options.

I look forward to members of Congress from both sides of the aisle addressing this problem. Rebate reform is the best place to start.

Former U.S. Rep. Patrick J. Kennedy was lead sponsor of the Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act of 2008 and served on the President's Commission on Combating Drug Addiction and the Opioid Crisis. He is co-chair of Mental Health for Us and co-author, with Stephen Fried, of A "Common Struggle: A Personal Journey through the Past and Future of Mental Illness and Addiction."

Scenes From Yesterday

Wollaston, Mass. Depot

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Wollaston showing a train passing under the Beale Street Bridge on its way to Quincy Center. Newport Avenue is on the right. The old Wollaston Depot on the left, originally named Wollaston Heights, was on the right side of the tracks until Newport Avenue was widened. It was very narrow and still a dirt road at this time and was widened to ease navigation on the hill for horse drawn wagons when it was mud. The tall building at the top of the hill was the Wollaston Hotel. It was built in 1870 along with the depot when the land called Wollaston Heights was subdivided into house lots. The Old Colony Railroad Corporation built the railroad on this right-of-way in 1845. John Quincy Adams was still serving as the U.S. congressman from the district that included Quincy when it was built so very close to his home on Adams Street.

Lane, Ross Win Mayoral Nominations

State Rep. Myron N. Lane and former Mayor Charles A. Ross were nominated for mayor in Tuesday's city preliminary election. Lane led the field of five candidates with 4,807 votes followed closely by Ross who had 4,478 votes.

Lane expressed his appreciation for his vote stating, "In return for this endorsement I intend to conduct a clean, vigorous campaign, confined to the real issues before us. If I am elected mayor I intend to give the city the best municipal administration in its history."

Ross said, "The vote indicates ultimate victory. It reflects confidence throughout the city and is evidence of the approval of my pledge to continue the stability and progress and betterment of Quincy."

(Editor's note: Ross, who served as mayor during the 1930s, would win the election. The 1942 city election was for three-year terms for mayor and city council. The election ended the staggered elections in place in Quincy since 1920.)

BURGIN MADE NAVY LIEUTENANT, JENNESS WILL BE ACTING MAYOR

Mayor Thomas Burgin, who had announced that he would retire from office at the end of his term to enlist in the Armed Forces, said that he had been commissioned as full lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

The First Naval Division announced later that Burgin had been assigned to the office of the supervisor of shipbuilding at the Fore River Shipyard. He reported for duty Monday, Nov. 16.

Ward 1 Councillor and Council President William W. Jenness would serve as acting Mayor for the balance of Burgin's term, which ends on the first Monday of January 1943.

Under the law, Burgin and Jenness will share the mayoral salary of $96 per week. Each received one-half ($48).

A Few More Recipes For Thanksgiving From Marie & Susie

By SUSIE

Thanksgiving is almost here!

I mainly make pretty traditional recipes, giving them a healthy upgrade by replacing ingredients that do not meet my standards, but do not deprive anyone of their favorites.

A plant based diet is something we should all strive for, and by this I do not mean ONLY plant based foods, I mean mainly. So have your organic turkey and all the fixings, but its always important to add a vegan or vegetarian side dish or two.

These two recipes are by Kyleen Keenan, owner of "Not Your Sugar Mamas." I copied them here for you exactly how she makes them. These are simple, and incredibly delicious, not to mention healthy.

Remember, food is our medicine and medicine is our food. Enjoy these as much as I do.

Roasted Crusted Vegan Cauliflower

(By Kyleen Keenan of "Not Your Sugar Mamas")

- 1 cup cashews
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon apple cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon poultry seasoning (not turkey seasoning, which usually has sugar)
- 4 tablespoon tamari or coconut aminos (plus extra for marinating)

1. The night before or at least a half hour before - remove some leaves from cauliflower and slice the bottom so it lays flat. Poke holes with a fork in cauliflower. Using coconut aminos or tamari, drench the cauliflower and set aside to marinate.

2. Preheat oven to 425F. Meanwhile make the "crust" by combining cup cashews, 1 tsp lemon juice, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon apple cider vinegar, and 1 tsp poultry seasoning and 4 tsp coconut aminos or tamari in a blender.

3. Cover the cauliflower with half of the marinade. Cover with aluminum foil or parchment in oven and cook for 1 hour.

4. Remove from oven and apply more marinade, cook uncovered for 15 minutes. Cauliflower should be tender when poked through.

Cook time will vary depending on the size of the cauliflower head. Serve with shiitake gravy, over a bed of lentils and kale or however you'd like!

Shiitake Gravy (Vegan)

(By Kyleen Keenan of "Not Your Sugar Mamas")

- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1/2 red onion
- 4 garlic cloves
- 1 cup chopped shiitake mushrooms
- 1/4 cup tamari*
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon thyme
- 1.5 tablespoons poultry seasoning
- 2 cups water or vegetable stock
- 2 tablespoon cassava flour or 1 tablespoon arrowroot

1. In a medium saucepan over medium heat, sauté red onion and garlic cloves in olive oil (or plant based butter) until translucent. About 5 minutes.

2. Add shiitakes, tamari, black pepper, thyme and poultry seasoning and sauté another 5 minutes or until mushrooms have absorbed the tamari.

3. Add the 2 cups of water and boil for 10 minutes.

4. While gravy is boiling, carefully remove half-cup liquid from pot and mix with cassava flour and add back to pot, whisking to combine. Let boil a minute or so longer.

5. You can leave chunky or carefully transfer gravy to a Vitamix and blend on low until creamy. Serve immediately or keep in the fridge for 5 days.

Note: sub coconut aminos for tamari but

Cranberry Sauce

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for three foods that we can enjoy for Thanksgiving Day and beyond.

One is for a very simple cranberry sauce that my daughters Rita and Ann Marie make and the other is for pumpkin cheese cake and pumpkin pecan pie both made without the conventional pie crust. They are made with ginger snaps or graham crackers.

These recipes are timeless and may be some you have already made.

CRANBERRY SAUCE

- 1 cup cranberries
- 1/3 cup orange juice
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix all of the ingredients together, and then cook in a pan until the cranberries are all blended in the juices. Within a few minutes you have the most delicious cranberry sauce ever.

Pumpkin Cheese Cake

- 3-eight ounce packages cream cheese (softened)
- 1-15 ounce can pumpkin mix (without sugar)
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 eggs

In a bowl, whip up the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla until smooth. Add the pumpkin and the beaten eggs and mix well. Set aside.

For the Crust

- 1 1/2 cups ginger snaps or graham crackers
- 5 tablespoons melted butter

Mix the two ingredients together and place on a greased pie plate pressing on the bottom and on the sides. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 8 minutes.

Remove from the oven and place the filling. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 15 minutes, and then at 350 degrees for one hour or until a toothpick comes clean from the center.

Pumpkin, Pecan Pie

- 1-15 ounce pumpkin pie mix (without sugar)
- 5 ounces evaporated milk (or 2% milk)
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 2 eggs (beaten)
- 1/2 cups chopped pecans

Mix the eggs, milk, sugar and spices until blended. Add the pumpkin and nuts and stir until smooth.

Use either of the crusts and bake for 8 minutes in a 400 degree oven. Then when filled bake for 425 degree oven for 15 minutes and then 350 degree for one hour or until toothpick comes out clean in the center.

Giblet Turkey Stuffing

By MARIE

This is a recipe for stuffing that I usually make for Thanksgiving Day. It contains the giblets from the turkey. If you don't want to use them, just eliminate them from the recipe.

GIBLET TURKEY STUFFING

- 4 ounces of ground meat (any favorite)
- 2 stalks celery (chopped)
- 1 small onion (chopped)
- Livers from the turkey (cut up)
- 2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning (or thyme)
- 1/2 bag stuffing mix
- 1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- 1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 cup white wine

Saute the celery and onion. Add the ground meat and the livers and the wine. Cover and cook until meat is done. Add the stuffing mix that you have soaked in water or stock.

Stir and cook covered, then add the bread crumbs and the cheese and cook for another few minutes. If the mixture looks thin, add more crumbs. If thick add more liquid (water or stock).

You can either cook the stuffing separately or when completely cooled in the turkey. If separate, bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes until done.

Abigail Adams Birthday Celebration Friday At United First Parish Church

'Abigail Adams And The World Of Slavery'

The History and Visitors Program at United First Parish Church, Church of the Presidents announces a special evening of historical programming to support the History and Visitors Program and to honor the 275th birthday anniversary of Abigail Adams.

The program will be held Friday, Nov. 22 at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Doors open for the event at 6 pm.

At 7 p.m. Professor Kerima Lewis will present her talk entitled "Abigail Adams and the World of Slavery." Although it is well known that John and Abigail Adams did not personally own slaves, what is not well known is that slavery touched the life of Abigail Adams in several ways. This talk takes a close look at Abigail's familial connections to Atlantic world slavery to increase understanding of the institution, introduce the enslaved persons with whom Abigail interacted and to trace the transatlantic journey which brought captive West Africans to New England by way of the West Indies. Professor Lewis teaches at Emerson and Quincy Colleges. She holds a doctorate in history, a law degree and a master's degree in social work and has been a Massachusetts Historical Society Fellow.

Other components of the evening's program include the opportunity for participants to contribute their thoughts and reflections to a larger exhibit of her words in the church's crypt corridor and to lay a flower on the First Lady's tomb. A reception will follow Professor Lewis' presentation with beer and wine provided by Craig's Café.

Admission to the event will be by donation and all donations support the History and Visitors Program at United First Parish Church. Tickets may be purchased online at Eventbrite (search for "Remembering Abigail at 275") or at the door that evening. The suggested starting donation is $10.

The first 100 donations of $10 will receive an official Abigail commemorative stamp and envelope from its first day of issue on June 14, 1985. All donations above $10 will also receive a Purfections chocolate of their choice (milk or dark chocolate) with an image of Abigail Adams.

Salmonella: Symptoms, Treatment And Prevention

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Salmonella infection is a common bacterial disease that affects the intestinal tract. Salmonella bacteria normally live in the intestines of animals and humans and are shed through feces. Humans become infected most frequently through contaminated food or water.

Typically, most people with salmonella infection have no symptoms. Others acquire diarrhea, fever and abdominal cramps within eight to 72 hours. The majority of healthy people recover within a few days without specific treatment. In certain cases, the diarrhea associated with salmonella infection can cause dehydration requiring swift medical attention. Life-threatening complications also may arise if the infection spreads beyond the intestines. A person's risk of developing salmonella infection is higher if they travel to countries with poor sanitation.

Salmonella infection is usually caused by eating raw or undercooked meat (particularly ground beef), poultry, eggs or egg products. The incubation period ranges from several hours to two days. Possible signs and symptoms include:

- Nausea
- Vomiting
- Abdominal cramps
- Diarrhea
- Fever
- Chills
- Headache
- Blood in the stool

The signs and symptoms of salmonella infection usually last two to seven days. Diarrhea may last up to 10 days; however it may take several months before bowels return to normal. A few varieties of salmonella bacteria result in typhoid fever, a sometimes deadly disease that is more prevalent in developing countries.

Most people are infected with salmonella by eating foods that have been contaminated by feces. Commonly infected foods include:

• Raw meat, poultry and seafood. Feces may get onto raw meat and poultry during the butchering process. Seafood may be contaminated if harvested from contaminated water.

• Raw eggs. While an egg's shell may appear to be an ideal barrier to contamination, some infected chickens produce eggs that contain salmonella before the shell is even formed.

• Fruits and vegetables.

Some fresh produce, particularly imported varieties, may be hydrated in the field or washed during processing with water contaminated with salmonella. Contamination also can occur in the kitchen, when juices from raw meat and poultry come into contact with uncooked foods, such as salads.

Many foods become contaminated when prepared by people who have not washed their hands thoroughly after using the toilet or changing a diaper. Infection also can occur if you touch something that is contaminated, including pets, especially birds and reptiles, and then put your fingers in your mouth.

Factors that may amplify your risk of salmonella infection include activities that may cause closer contact with salmonella bacteria or health problems that may weaken your resistance to infection in general. These risks include:

Increased exposure

• International travel.

Salmonella infection, including varieties that cause typhoid fever, is more common in developing countries with poor sanitation.

• Owning a pet bird or reptile. Some pets, particularly birds and reptiles, can carry salmonella bacteria.

• Stomach or bowel disorders

Your body possesses many natural defenses against salmonella infection, such as stomach acid that can kill many types of salmonella bacteria. However, some medical problems or medications can affect these natural defenses. Examples include:

• Antacids. Lowering your stomach's acidity allows more salmonella bacteria to survive.

• Inflammatory bowel disease. This condition damages the lining of your intestines, which makes it easier for salmonella bacteria to survive.

• Recent use of antibiotics. This can reduce the number of helpful bacteria in your intestines, which may affect your ability to fight off a salmonella infection.

• Immune problems

The following medical problems or medications appear to increase your risk of contracting salmonella by impairing your immune system.

- AIDS
- Sickle cell disease
- Malaria
- Anti-rejection drugs taken after organ transplants
- Corticosteroids

Salmonella infection usually isn't life-threatening. However, in certain people, particularly infants, young children, older adults, transplant recipients, pregnant women, and people with weakened immune systems, the development of complications can be serious. Complications can include:

• Dehydration - from lack of fluids and diarrhea

• Bacteremia - if salmonella infection enters your bloodstream

• Reactive arthritis - People who have had salmonella are at higher risk of developing reactive arthritis. Also known as Reiter's syndrome

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), in 2016, created a Salmonella Action Plan, which involves updating the poultry slaughter inspection system and enhancing sampling and testing programs for poultry and meat. This plan represents the agency's strategy to best address the threat of Salmonella in meat and poultry products. The plan's purpose is to cut the number of salmonella infections in the United States.

Everyone can become involved in efforts to avoid spreading Salmonella to others. Preventive methods are especially important when preparing food or providing care for infants, older adults and people with weakened immune systems. Be sure to always cook food thoroughly and refrigerate or freeze food promptly. Other tips include:

• Washing your hands thoroughly can help prevent the transfer of salmonella bacteria to your mouth or to any food you're preparing. Wash your hands after you:

- Use the toilet
- Change a diaper
- Handle raw meat or poultry

• Clean up pet feces

• Touch reptiles or birds

• Keep things separate to prevent cross-contamination:

- Store raw meat, poultry and seafood away from other foods in your refrigerator
- If possible, have several cutting boards in your kitchen, one for raw meat and the other for fruits and vegetables
- Never place cooked food on an unwashed plate that previously held raw meat

• Avoid eating raw eggs in such items as cookie dough, homemade ice cream and eggnog. If you must consume raw eggs, make sure they've been pasteurized.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

BID-Milton's Weight Loss Surgery Program Reaccredited By American College Of Surgeons

The Beth Israel Deaconess Milton (BID Milton) Weight Loss Surgery Program has been reaccredited as a "Comprehensive Center" by the American College of Surgeons' Metabolic and Bariatric Surgery Accreditation and Quality Improvement Program (MBSAQIP). This is the highest level of accreditation provided by MBSAQIP and is indicative of the program's quality of care.

The accreditation followed a comprehensive on-site review by an MBSAQIP bariatric surgeon surveyor who reviewed the program's structure, processes and clinical outcomes data in late summer. The surveyor determined the program met national, best-practice standards for staffing, training, facility infrastructure and protocols for care, ensuring its ability to support patients with severe obesity.

"This reaccreditation at the highest level by a national healthcare quality organization is evidence of the exceptional care provided to every patient by our surgeons and multidisciplinary team," said Souheil Adra, MD, medical director of weight loss surgery and director of Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians surgery at BID Milton. "The hospital offers a long-standing community-based program affiliated with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and has been a leader in providing minimally invasive surgery options for long-term weight loss."

BID Milton's Weight Loss Surgery Program offers several surgical options for patients who have struggled with obesity, including gastric bypass, gastric sleeve, lap band and revision surgery.

The hospital was the first to offer minimally invasive robotic surgery for gastric bypass procedures in the region. BID-Milton has the largest robotic surgery program on the South Shore.

"Reaccreditation as a Comprehensive Center is another significant milestone in the growth of the hospital's Weight Loss Surgery Program," said Angela Fenton, MA, LMHC, senior director of clinical integration. "It ensures patients will receive the highest quality care based on nationally accepted standards pre and post operatively."

Patients who wish to enroll in the program must first attend an in-person information seminar or watch a seminar online. BID-Milton

Winter Farmers Market At YMCA

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Farmers Market will be open on eleven Fridays this winter inside the Quincy YMCA on Coddington Street.

The Board of License Commissioners on Nov. 12 granted the market permission to set up shop inside the YMCA at 79 Coddington St. The winter market will be open on Fridays from Dec. 6 to Feb. 14, between 11:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. on each of those days.

It will operate inside a conference room in the building.

Market manager Janet Little said she already has commitments from 16 vendors who will take part in the winter market. She has reached out to a number of other vendors as well.

"For many years now, we have been interested in going into the winter," Little said.

Those vendors who have committed include one who specializes in organic greens, a fishmonger, a beef farmer, one who sells specialty salts, another who offers a variety of honeys, and an alpaca farmer who sells various wool products.

In addition, the market will feature various bakers, ice cream and frozen yogurt sellers, a vendor who sells jams and jellies, and a vendor who offers Italian pastas and sauces.

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said he was on board with the request.

"Janet does a great with the farmers market," he said. "I'm sure it will work out great down there."

In other business on Nov. 12, the board:

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – Using A Restricted Application To Maximize Benefits

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I was born on 1/14/1953, and my wife was born on 6/27/1954. I will have the largest Social Security benefit by 2 or 3 to one. She has been retired for a year or so, but I am working part time. We planned on not taking our SS until 70, since my IRA and Social Security will cover us until 90plus. I want to maximize my SS benefit in case we live past then. I have read about a restricted application and file and suspend, but I get conflicting information on who must be born before 1/2/54. Is there anything we can do besides wait to 70 to maximize our benefits? Signed: Wanting to Maximize

Dear Wanting: How you, as a married couple, should plan your Social Security depends largely upon whether your wife will be eligible for a spousal benefit from you and, if so, how much her spousal benefit will be. Your wife will get a spousal benefit from you if her own benefit amount at her full retirement age (66) is less than half of your benefit amount at your full retirement age (66). The difference between those two amounts will be added to your wife's own benefit (from her own work record) to become her spousal benefit. At her full retirement age (FRA) she would get 50% of the amount you were eligible for at your FRA, which you reached in January 2019. If your wife's benefit at age 70 will be more than her spousal benefit will be, then it would be prudent for her to delay claiming until age 70 when her benefit will be 32% more than it would be when she turns 66. However, if her spousal benefit will be more, it could make sense for your wife to file for her own benefit first, which would allow you to file a "restricted application for spousal benefits only." Your wife cannot file a restricted application because she was born after January 1, 1954, but you can file the restricted application because you were born before that (the "File and suspend" option which allowed your wife to collect spouse benefits while your benefits are suspended is no longer available).

Provided your current finances, as well as your health and expected longevity suggest you can delay, it would be a wise strategy for you to delay claiming until age 70 because it will provide you with the maximum possible monthly benefit and also the most in cumulative lifetime benefits if you attain at least "average" longevity (about 84). This would also give your wife the highest possible survivor benefit should you predecease her (as your widow, your wife gets 100% of the benefit you were receiving at your death). Your wife cannot collect a spousal benefit from you until you start your own benefits, but if she were to choose to claim her own Social Security retirement benefit from her own work record first (so you could file the restricted application), she would switch to her higher spousal benefit when you claim.

So, if your wife's spousal benefit will be her highest benefit, as a couple you may wish to consider your wife filing for her own benefit to start in January (will be reduced by about 3.3%) and, at that time, you file a "restricted application for spousal benefits only" which means you will collect 50% of your wife's (unreduced) FRA benefit amount while your own Social Security benefit continues to earn delayed retirement credits (DRCs). DRCs are given at the rate of 2/3rd of 1% per month of delay (8% per year of delay), up until age 70 when your benefit will be 24% more than it would be at age 67. Then, at age 70, when you switch from the spousal benefit from your wife to your own SS retirement benefit, your wife can file for her spousal benefit from you. If you are, indeed, fortunate enough to live well into your 80s, the above will provide you with considerably more in lifetime benefits than any other strategy you might consider.

Wollaston Center Proposal Before Planning Board

Beale Street.

The three parcels include 28,000 square feet of land in a Business C zoning district.

The Planning Board held a public hearing on the proposal Nov. 13. No vote was taken during the meeting and the applicant is slated to go back before the board in January.

Edward Fleming, Zhang's attorney, said he met with the city's Planning Department and Mayor Thomas Koch to come up with the best proposal for the site. He also attended a pair of community meetings held to discuss the future of Wollaston Center.

"The gathering of all of the information we thought was really important to design a project that made sense for Wollaston business district and met with the city's criteria and their dreams and what the community wanted to see here," Fleming said.

First-floor retail space was one of the items the Planning Department wanted to see included in the project, he said.

"They wanted to continue the rich history of the Wollaston business district as a business district,"

Fleming said. "They didn't want to see just a residential development."

Three of the new storefronts along Beale Street would range in size from 1,000 to 1,200 square feet, according to architect David Freed; the retail space at the corner of Beale and Cushing Streets would include 4,200 square feet of space split between the first and second floors of the building. At a May community meeting on the proposal, Fleming said that space could potentially accommodate a brewery, taproom and restaurant.

Each of the four retail spaces would have a basement.

A two-level parking garage with 89 parking spaces would be located behind the retail space. One level of the garage would be accessible on Cushing Street and the other level would be located on Chapman Street, along with a loading dock.

The 75 apartments would sit above the storefronts and garage. Of those 75 units, 52 would include one bedroom, 20 would have two bedrooms and the remaining three would be studio apartments. The building would also include a gym and community room on the second floor above the street-level retail; those spaces would be open to the public. An interior courtyard would be located above the garage as well.

The building would vary in height from four floors at the rear of the site to seven stories in one place along Beale Street. The closest setback to the property line in the rear of the building would be ten feet; some of the residential units would have balconies extending three feet into that setback.

Erin Fredette, a traffic engineer for the applicant, said the building would generate an additional vehicle trip every two to three minutes over existing conditions during peak hours.

"It's a relatively low impact given its close proximity to the T station," she said.

A 75-unit residential building near a rapid transit station, like the one Zhang is proposing, would have peak parking demand of 61 spaces, Fredette said, based data from the Institute of Transportation Engineers.

"We are proposing 89 [spaces], so...the anticipated demand is less than what we are proposing for the residential," Fredette said.

The developer anticipates parking associated with the commercial uses would happen on the street or at the Wollaston MBTA station's parking lot, she added. Fleming said the retail tenants' employees could potentially park inside the garage.

Residents who spoke during the Planning Board meeting said they were concerned about the size of the building and the number of parking spaces included in the proposal.

"They are proposing a brewery...that means coming and going and cars moving. There's just not enough parking for the multi stories that already live there, let alone bringing in more people," said Linda Johnson. "We have a lot of concerns."

Johnson, an abutter to the site on Chapman Street, was also concerned about the proximity of the proposed building to her home. She said she would lose privacy because the balconies would overlook her home and vehicles in the garage would shine their headlights into her residence.

Carla Moran, a Linden Street resident, said the project was attractive and welcomed the retail component, but believed the building would not have enough parking.

"All these things sound nice...but it's parking, parking, parking," she said. "It looks nice, but there has got to be fewer units, more parking, or something to make it really contribute to the neighborhood."

Ward 5 Councillor-elect Charles Phelan Jr. said he liked the project but agreed with residents' concerns over the number of parking spaces. Phelan also said he was against giving the developer permission to build part of the building seven stories high when the zoning code would only allow a six-story building.

"I like the development. I ran on the basis that I wanted to see something done in Wollaston Center and these people have put together a good project," he said. "But I have to say on the heights, I campaigned on saying I would not allow variances on the zoning issues. The zoning is the zoning law."

In addition, Phelan said the board needs to take into consideration other potential projects that could be proposed for Wollaston Center.

One such project could take place on the site that was formerly home to the Wollaston Theater on the opposite side of Beale Street. The owner of the property unveiled plans to build a 63-unit residential building at an April community meeting.

Point Webster School, Quirk Subaru Celebrate STEM Week

POINT WEBSTER MIDDLE School recently partnered with Quirk Subaru through the 2019 Subaru Loves Learning Initiative. This partnership enabled Quirk Subaru to donate over 150 STEM books to science and technology classes. Students in Ms. Roger's grade 6 science classes read "My First Book of Quantum Physics." This book takes difficult science concepts and makes them accessible to students with entertaining illustrations and simple language. Concepts include Isaac Newton and his contributions to the knowledge of gravity and motion. Later in the year, students will use the books again to study radioactivity, atoms and molecules and light waves. The school thanks Quirk Subaru for donating so many STEM-related books through Subaru Loves Learning! A request for permission to fuel, maintain and store trolleys at a North Quincy site now used for ambulances was approved by city officials.

Old Town Trolley Tours had sought a fuel storage license and an automotive repair license for the premises at 199 Commander Shea Blvd. The Board of License Commissioners voted 3-2 in favor of the request on Nov. 12. The board held a hearing plan last month and asked the applicant to come back after meeting with area residents.

Fallon Ambulance in 2008 received permission from the licensing board to store ambulances and fuel on site, as well as a repair license for Central Ave Auto Service, Edward Fleming, the attorney representing Old Town Trolley Tours, said during the October board meeting. Fallon was allowed to store more than 2,000 gallons of gasoline and diesel in an underground tank on the site, Fleming said, plus 3,000 gallons of gasoline and diesel above ground in 45 or more ambulances and 500 gallons of miscellaneous fuel.

Fallon will be moving out of the site and Old Town Trolley Tours plans to move in in September 2020, Fleming said in October. His client plans to store 3,000 gallons of diesel fuel in an above ground tank while using the site to fuel and repair its trolleys; the company's trolleys do not run on gasoline. Central Ave Auto would remain on site, with the building modified to separate it from the trolley depot.

The board did not vote on the proposal in October and asked Fleming to further reach out to area residents. Ward 6 Councillor William Harris hosted a community meeting on the plan Nov. 7. Fleming said about a dozen area residents were at the community meeting and they came away satisfied with the proposal.

"After we had that discussion for about an hour, I can say a number of neighbors indicated to me that they were happy with the responses they got from the applicant," Fleming said. "We agreed to a number of different conditions."

The trolley company, Fleming said, would prohibit employees from loitering on site in response to neighbors' concerns about that. The company will also make cosmetic repairs to the building, including improvements to lighting fixtures so they do not cause excess light pollution.

The trolleys will be fueled during the evening and will only be started inside the building; Fleming said the company would be able to fuel the trolleys inside the building if the city signs off on it. The trolleys' schedule in the morning will be staggered to limit the number of trolleys that leave between 7 and 9 a.m. to six.

Fleming also said the owner of the building, Hudson Media, has agreed to remove the underground fuel tanks on site.

Katie Donnelly, the chairwoman of the trustees at the SeaWinds condominium building, which is located next door to the site at 90 Quincy Shore Dr., spoke in favor of the proposal during the license board meeting.

"I've talked to many people who really agree with this transition and really agree with Old Town Trolley," Donnelly said. "It's not going to be very different

Quincy Choral Society Performance Celebrates Fair Saturday Nov. 30

As part of a worldwide movement, Quincy Choral Society will participate in Fair Saturday Nov. 30, a global effort that aims to create a positive social impact.

The festival is held yearly on the last Saturday of November. Artists and cultural organizations from around the world get together with only one requirement: to support a social cause of their choice through their performance.

Led by interim Music Director Sarah Labrie, Quincy Choral will perform at the James R. McIntyre

Government Center (old City Hall) in the Great Hall at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 30. The performance is free of charge, but donations will be accepted for DOVE, which provides support and services for victims of domestic violence.

Fair Saturday originated in Bilbao, Spain, and now has participants in England, Scotland, and Wales, Finland, Peru, Portugal, and The Netherlands among other countries. Quincy is the first city in the United States to participate, with Quincy Choral as the first artistic group to participate.

In addition, Fair Saturday founder Jordi Albareda taught the chorus "Agur Jaunak," a Basque song of respect and welcome or farewell. Conducted by Music Director Joshua W. Rohde, the chorus then made a video recording of its performance, which will open the festivities on Nov. 30 at Bilbao Stadium, attended by approximately 8,000 people, and will be shared worldwide as well.

Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world. The chorus performs locally and has performed in music festivals in Washington, D.C., in Europe, at Carnegie Hall as part of the Masterworks Series, and most recently in Montreal and Quebec. In September 2018, the Chorus participated in the dedication of the Hancock - Adams Common.

Sullivan will be working as part of Mayor Koch's new Department of Natural Resources. She will be joined by a new tree warden this month. Her office is located at One Merrymount Parkway with the Park, Forestry, and Recreation Divisions of Natural Resources.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to develop initiatives to protect the health of Quincy's unique and valuable natural resources for generations to come," Sullivan said. "I especially look forward to working with the Quincy community to further the remarkable environmental protection efforts that are already in progress in the city."

"For years, our residents have been great stewards of our city's resources," said Dave Murphy, commissioner of Natural Resources. "Julie can now bring her skills and experience to add to the great work done by our residents. Working together, I expect we will see tangible, important improvements in the overall quality of our natural resources in Quincy. We are very excited to have her on board."

Sullivan's phone number in the Department of Natural Resources is (617) 376-1287. Her email address is juliannesullivan@quincyma.gov.

Proposed Special Ed Center Opening Pushed Back

By TOM GORMAN
School officials have pushed back the opening of the proposed special education learning center to the summer of 2021.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro informed the school committee on Nov. 13 that the initial planned opening set for September 2020 would likely not be met given the need for public input that will lead to the design, construction and development of programs of the new center.

"It may be we were a bit too ambitious in our timeline," he said.

The city is planning to purchase a three-story office building on Old Colony Avenue in back of Central Middle School and convert it into a special education learning center to provide in-district programs. Mayor Thomas Koch previously explained the center would save the city $500,000 in its first year and potentially millions in subsequent years by keeping special needs students in the city rather than sending them to private programs.

The committee unanimously voted to support Koch's proposal to seek an $8.5 million bond for the purchase of the building from Eastern Nazarene College and renovate it. The city council was to vote on the proposal on Monday night, five days after the school committee meeting.

DeCristofaro said that after conversations with Koch, Paul Hines of Public Buildings, the architect and special education staff, it was decided more time is needed to properly develop the center. Officials are now looking for the renovation project to be completed in January or February of 2021.

"Considering that we're looking at an extensive design and extensive construction to make this center, as the mayor said, the very best for our children, staff and families...we think (pushing back the opening) is far better for the parents," said DeCristofaro.

The superintendent said that if all goes well, the center could open in the summer of 2021 for summer programs and then be ready for the new school year starting in September. The additional time will give parents a better opportunity to provide input for the center's program as well as ready their children for transition to the new facility.

"The bottom line is we want a real meaningful timeline so we can show parents this is the place you want to bring your children," he said.

Koch agreed that the original timeframe "wasn't feasible," and emphasized that the purchasing timetable hasn't changed.

"We want to get traction, get it completed, and get in there," he said.

Three weeks ago, the citywide PTO hosted a public forum on the proposed center in the building. According to committee member Douglas Gutro, nearly 100 parents and residents attended the forum where comments, questions, and concerns were aired.

"This was an extraordinary sign there is an appetite for interest by parents in learning more about this," he said.

Gutro said the idea of the city providing in-house special education programs "is laudable" and that the building is a good, convenient location and offers good space. He, however, said a breakdown of costs such as out-of-district transportation and tuition, operation, and potential impact to the city's budget hasn't been completed.

Gutro added that there are 73 FAQs (frequently asked questions) that have been compiled that school officials will work on to provide answers.

"We have more questions than answers," he said.

Gutro expressed "confidence" that "a quality program" can be provided in-district.

The committee voted to support having QPAC (Quincy Parents Advisory Council), comprised of parents of special education students to be involved in the planning and designing of the building and programs.

"Parent participation through the process I think is essential," said Gutro.

A few weeks ago, DeCristofaro unveiled proposed program plans. Each floor will be known as a neighborhood and dedicated to particular grades. Each classroom will have professional occupations, speech and physical therapists, special education teachers, and paraeducators. Teachers will work with students in small groups or individually and rooms will be custom designed for special education and disabled students.

The center will be for students prekindergarten through grade 8. The program will help develop language, social, community, and self-care skills. Officials said that some in-district students may be able to attend the center as well as those being sent out of the city.

The city plans to open the new school, which would operate 12 months a year, in the summer of 2021.

Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the school would be built to accommodate students on the autism spectrum. He said 30 to 40 of those students currently attending programs outside of Quincy could move into the new special education center in its first year. The city spends up to $120,000 per student on transportation and tuition to send those students out of district.

The students currently enrolled in out-of-district programs would be allowed to remain in those programs, DeCristofaro said.

The district has some 175 students enrolled in its CARES (Children Achieve Real Educational Success) program at five sites throughout the city who could potentially move into the new special education center, school officials said.

The new special education center could also accept students from other communities, DeCristofaro said, but the decision to do so will not be made until the program is up and running. The superintendent said the new center could accommodate nearly 300 students at full capacity.

DeCristofaro said school officials have long discussed the idea of opening a new center for special education students.

"This notion has been talked about for quite a long period of time," he said.

"This will ensure that all of our children that will attend will be spending less time on transportation and more quality time with our dedicated staff. This building will allow our school system to enhance parent involvement with a very special, unique, parent resource center. It would also allow us to limit site and programmatic transitions from one building to another for our children, because this building would be their school."

"We like to think about this building as four walls with hope inside," DeCristofaro added.

The city expects to save money by moving the 30 to 40 students from out-of-district programs to the new special education center. City economist Eric Mason said the savings could total $350,000 in year one, even after accounting for the costs to staff, operate and maintain the building. That number could grow over time.

"The proposal before you tonight provides the opportunity to do something incredibly important for many of our young people and families and at the same time save money," said Chris Walker, Koch's chief of staff.

Erin Perkins, the school system's director of special education, called the proposal a "truly wonderful opportunity for both our students and our families."

The current plan for the school includes four learning neighborhoods divided by age group, Perkins said. The learning neighborhoods would be for students in pre-k, kindergarten through second grade, grades three through five, and sixth through eighth grade.

"We think having learning neighborhoods is a really nice opportunity for us to address different needs depending on the age level of the students," Perkins said.

The center would also include rooms for therapy, including speech, occupational and physical therapy; a music therapy room; an adapted gym and motor skills room; an adapted outdoor playground; a sensory space; a calming space; a life skills classroom for older students, which could include a mock living area and workshop; conference rooms for staff use and use by the Quincy Parent Advisory Council to Special Education; a parent resource center; professional development space; and dedicated testing areas.

In addition, Perkins said school officials want to provide afterschool opportuni-

On Friday, Nov. 8, at approximately 8 p.m., Officer Bulger was dispatched to Quincy Medical Center on a "911" call from the emergency room, where an employee stated that a patient just assaulted a doctor.

Upon arrival, the officer was met by a Brewster EMT who stated a patient was "becoming out of control." He then went to the patient's room where he found numerous hospital employees standing in and at the doorway.

Inside the room Officer Bulger observed a male on the floor being restrained by hospital security. The officer was informed the patient became uncontrollable after the doctor told him he was releasing him from care. The patient became angry at the doctor, claiming he did not receive the care he wanted.

The doctor reiterated the patient couldn't stay in the emergency room and could go back to Father Bill's, where he was residing. The patient loudly declared he wasn't going back to Father Bill's and then grabbed the doctor around the chest area and ripped his hospital jacket and the lanyard around his neck completely off. Once this happened, security was called and they tried to subdue the patient, who was now aggressively flailing around recklessly. The patient then shattered the screen on a heart monitor that was in the room.

Officer Bulger spoke with the doctor who said he was physically fine but "a little shaken up" from being hit and wanted the patient removed from the premises and charged for the assault and battery and for damaging the monitor valued at $1,200. Officer Bulger placed the patient under arrest and handcuffed him.

The patient stated he couldn't walk without his cane so he was wheel chaired to the cruiser by a Brewster Paramedic. While heading to the station, the patient told the officer he broke the monitor because it wouldn't stop beeping. He kept repeating to the officer, "I would rather die than go back to Father Bill's. Just stick a needle in me and end it now."

Officer Bulger provided the patient with other options but none appealed to him. Once at the station, Officer Bulger told the booking sergeant about the statements the patient made so Brewster Ambulance EMTs were requested to make an evaluation. Upon arrival, the EMTs stated they were very familiar with the patient due to a history of making suicidal statements, with the most recent one of wanting to commit suicide by cop. At this time it was determined that the patient needed to be evaluated for mental health issues and was transported to the Carney Hospital.

The patient, a 30-year-old homeless male, was charged with assault and battery and defacing or damaging property. At 2:05 a.m., a clinician at Carney Hospital contacted Sgt. O'Donoghue stating the patient had been evaluated and was being discharged from their care. Officers O'Hare and Brown transported him from the hospital to the station where he was booked. A violation of probation warrant from Hingham District Court was also located during the booking process.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Tuesday Nov. 12, at approximately 7:35 p.m., numerous officers were dispatched to the CVS on Beale Street for a robbery in progress. As Officers Lawless, Graham, Millane, Adams, Sergeants Lencki and Ward were heading to the scene, Officer O'Donnell, who was working a traffic detail nearby, ran over to the store and was the first to arrive. Communications provided a description of the male suspect along with his clothing attire.

Officer O'Donnell entered the store, spotted the suspect and quickly apprehended and handcuffed him. As officers arrived on scene, the suspect was placed in a cruiser while

Officer Lawless investigated the incident, first interviewing one of the pharmacy employees, who said the suspect approached the counter and told her he needed to refill his prescription. When she asked the suspect for his name and date of birth, the suspect hesitated and then said, "I'm thinking about it."

The suspect then passed a note to the employee that read, "ACT Normal /don't stall time /I'm watching /Grab All 2mg Xanax /Grab All 30mg Oxycodone /No Alarms or staling / You have 10 seconds for no one to get hurt /Meds are replaceable/You're NOT/GO." The suspect then reached into the front of his jacket which the employee said made her believe the suspect had a weapon and would harm her.

The employee said she began to cry and that is when one of the pharmacists noticed and came over to assist. The employee then ran to the other side of the pharmacy and called "911." The pharmacist unknowingly asked the suspect if she could help him and he responded that the other employee was assisting him and motioned towards her. The pharmacist said she would take over so the suspect passed the same note across the counter and before she could finish reading it, he grabbed it back into his possession and told her to "Make it quick."

The pharmacist told the suspect the store did not have 30mg Oxycodone and gave him a bottle of Alprazolam (used mainly to treat anxiety and panic disorders). The pharmacist told Officer Lawless the suspect kept his hand in the front of his jacket as if he had a weapon during the conversation. The suspect then attempted to flee the store as Officer O'Donnell was walking in. The officer was able to quickly detain the suspect in the store's alcove.

The suspect was briefly removed from the cruiser and both victims confirmed he was the suspect. A search of the suspect uncovered a green knife, a mask and the note were found. The mask was not used. The white pill bottle taken from the suspect had 63 green pills in it.

CVS employees were able to provide video footage of the incident which was turned over to BCI.

Councillors Hear Presentation On Municipal Broadband

By SCOTT JACKSON

The CEO of the company that is working with Quincy officials on plans for a municipally-owned broadband network provided city councillors with an overview of the process recently, included estimates on how much it would cost to install.

Jeff Christensen of Entry Point Networks addressed councillors on Nov. 12. His company is working as a consultant to the city as officials study the feasibility of installing a fiber optic municipal broadband network.

The feasibility study includes a survey, available online at quincyfiber.com, to gauge residents' interest in the concept.

"So far we have a tremendously positive response in terms of filling out the survey we put out," said Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, who introduced a resolution last year asking the city to consider a municipal broadband network.

The survey will also be sent to residents during the annual city census next year, Mayor Thomas Koch said previously.

Residents would not be required to participate in the municipal broadband network, Christensen said. It would cost between $2,500 and $3,000 per household on average to install the fiber optic network, he said, and least 40 percent of homeowners would have to participate in order for it to be viable.

In Quincy, Christensen estimated some 17,000 households would have to sign up for the service for it to be viable. That would put the total cost to install the network in the range of $42.5 and $51 million.

The money to install the network would be borrowed up front and paid off by those who participate in it. Christensen said the installation costs would be paid off over 20 years at an expected cost of $20 per month; that charge would disappear once initial cost is paid off. Participating homeowners would also have to pay a monthly maintenance fee, also expected to be $20, which would pay for repairs to the system if needed.

Once the network is installed, customers would than what we currently have with the ambulance company, except for what I look at as a great environmental move getting those 20-year-old tanks out of the ground."

In addition, Donnelly said some of her building's residents were concerned about a large development taking place next door if the trolley company's request was not approved.

"The other thing that has been discussed from people in my building is if people keep fighting transportation companies coming in there, what's going to happen? If we end up with a high rise with 250 cars, what's the traffic going to look like there?" she said. "That's a major concern."

Harris spoke against the proposal at the board meeting. He said his constituents are concerned about the trolleys further tying up traffic on the Neponset Bridge.

"What's concerning to me and also concerning to other members of my constituents outside of the abutters is... the Neponset River Bridge," Harris said. "The problem is getting over that. Things don't really slow down much at nine o'clock, especially when there is weather, and it goes sometimes right until ten o'clock depending on the day of the week."

In addition, five residents sent letters to the board expressing their opposition to the proposal, according to City Clerk Nicole Crispo.

Crispo and Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson voted against the request. Inspection Services Director Jay Duca, Health Commissioner Ruth Jones and Police Chief Paul Keenan all voted for it.

Duca said the proposal would have less of an impact on neighbors.

"I kind of think this use is less of an impact to the neighbors," he said. "The reality is something is going to go there eventually. I don't think I would expect somebody to solve the traffic problems...it's just a bad intersection and I don't know the traffic problem will ever be solved."

New Public Safety Headquarters Plans Unveiled

By SCOTT JACKSON

The proposed new public safety headquarters – which would house the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, plus emergency management – no longer has space set aside for the Health, Inspectional Services and Veterans Services Departments.

Mayor Thomas Koch unveiled the latest proposal for the building, which would be located near the current police headquarters at 1 Sea St., at the Nov. 12 City Council meeting.

The mayor is asking the council to borrow $32 million to design the new building and acquire several parcels of land near Broad Street, including two parcels that could accommodate a new facility for Father Bill's Place. Koch also wants to purchase a vacant parcel on Quincy Avenue near the current Fire Department headquarters; that land could be used for a new fire station, while the department's administrative offices would move to the new Sea Street building.

The council will consider the request during a future committee meeting.

Officials first unveiled plans for the new public safety building in March. The plan at that time included a building with two wings. One would hold the Police Department, emergency management and Fire Department administration; Koch decided at that time not to move fire apparatus from the station on Quincy Avenue to Sea Street because it would increase response times in some areas. The second wing would have housed the Health, Inspectional Services and Veterans Services Departments.

At the Nov. 12 meeting,

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH recently unveiled the revised plan for the proposed public safety headquarters on Sea Street. It would replace Police Department headquarters and serve as a new home for Fire Department administration and the Emergency Management Department. The mayor no longer plans to relocate three other departments – Health, Inspectional Services, and Veterans Services – to the new building. Rendering Courtesy City of Quincy

Koch said the decision had been made to remove those three departments from the plan.

"We felt it was a little too aggressive trying to jam in all of this in one site with the parking needed as well as the resources needed, the space needed, by police, fire as well as emergency management," the mayor said.

A two-level parking garage on site would include 192 spaces and additional parking spaces would be located in a surface lot on the Broad Street side of the site. Koch said emergency vehicles would be able to exit onto both Broad Street and Sea Street.

A new public park, which the mayor said would be dedicated to first responders, would be located at the corner of Sea Street and Southern Artery in front of the new public safety building.

Koch is seeking to use $19 million of the $32 million bond to acquire five parcels, four of which are located in the area of Broad Street. Those parcels include 450 Southern Artery, which is currently home to a Stop & Shop gas station, 21 Broad St., 39 Broad St. and 12 Field St. The project would also include the city-owned parcel at 38 Broad St., where Father Bill's Place is now located, and 56 Broad St., where the Quincy Animal Shelter is located.

Koch said the city would use the parcels at 12 Field St. and 39 Broad St. to accommodate Father Bill's Place.

"I think in government we have a responsibility to help those...that need a safety net, that need some assistance to get back on their feet," Koch said. "We are fully committed and working to relocate Father Bill's to the other side of Broad Street."

The shelter would have a new concept, including some apartments and programs for the organization's clients during the daytime, Koch added. He said Father Bill's would pay for construction of the building and would seek federal and state funding to do so.

City officials are also designing a new Quincy Animal Shelter, which would be located on Quarry Street adjacent to a new dog park the city is constructing.

In addition to those four parcels, the mayor also wants to buy the vacant parcel of land at 47 Quincy Ave., where a new firehouse could be built. Koch said National Grid has put that land up for sale and some developers have reached out to the city to discuss putting housing there.

Koch said the city should move to purchase the parcel now and then put together plans for a new firehouse, similar to how the city acquired the former St. Mary School on Crescent Street, where a new elementary school could one day be built.

"We do need to look at replacing our main firehouse," he said. "That would be a perfect location to do that."

The remaining $13 million includes $6 million to the design the new building on Sea Street; $2.4 million for environmental efforts and contingency; $1.6 million for a project manager and peer reviewer; $1.5 million for agency coordination, permitting and infrastructure work; and $1 million for demolition and site clearing.

Koch hopes to begin demolition of select buildings next spring. The city would also start environmental work and seek federal funding for the project at that time.

The design of the new building would be finished next summer, and the project could be back before the City Council, with a guaranteed maximum price contract, in the fall of 2020.

Construction of the new building would begin in the spring of 2021 and it could be ready for move in as soon as the fall of 2022. All site work would be finished by the spring of 2023.

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy, in whose district the new building would be located, said he planned to hold public meetings on the proposal, including a meeting for area business owners. McCarthy welcomed the mayor's latest plan for the public safety building.

"I think it's a great plan. You're proactive once again," McCarthy said.

Councillor Anne Mahoney asked that a more detailed cost breakdown be provided before councillors vote on the matter.

"I realize this is a very important and timely project that needs to be addressed," she said.

The current police headquarters at 1 Sea St. was built in 1925 and renovated in the 1980s.

select from a list of internet service providers and could pay a separate fee to that company as well. Christensen said between five and ten different ISPs could be available to Quincy customers.

Overall, Christensen said customers could save up to 30 percent on their internet bills while receiving ten times their current bandwidth. Homeowners who do connect to the network would also see their property value rise by 3.1 percent on average.

"What we ask the subscriber, the consumer, is to make a commitment to the infrastructure – to think about it like their sewer and water," Christensen said.

"We're going to improve your property by connecting you through fiber optic cable to the internet."

The fiber optic cables would likely be installed on the utility poles already in place, Christensen said; the cables could also be installed underground but it would cost more to do so. The cable itself has an expected lifespan of 50 to 100 years though other components of the network, like servers, would need to be replaced every seven years.

"Putting this infrastructure in is going to future proof the city as far as communication technology goes," Christensen said.

Entry Point Networks worked with the city of Ammon, Idaho, to install a fiber optic network in recent years. Christensen said the company is also working with the northern California city of Redding – which has 91,000 residents – to launch a network there. Quincy and Redding are at the same point in the process, he said.

Cain and Koch announced the launch of the feasibility study in October. Since that time, Milton and Weymouth have both expressed interest in the idea, Christensen said.

At the October announcement, Cain said it could take about a year before installation of the new network commences. It will likely be done on a neighborhood-by-neighborhood basis depending on demand.

The John Adams Birthplace will look different this winter.

Adams National Historical Park is launching a $100,000 project to remove and replace the exterior pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace on Franklin Street. This project is being funded by visitor entrance fees.

The front and west side of the building will be encased so the project can be completed over the winter.

In addition to replacing the wooden clapboards, a vapor barrier will be installed to protect the original wooden features. Once completed, the historic fabric and features of the John Adams Birthplace will be retained and ready to greet visitors,

Fundraiser To Support Family Of Quincy Firefighter Who Passed Away Suddenly Oct. 9

Benefit For Family Of Jonathan O'Driscoll Dec. 6

At Quincy Sons Of Italy

The family and friends of Jonathan O'Driscoll will host "A Night for the O'Driscoll Family" at Sons of Italy in Quincy on Friday, Dec. 6 from 7 a.m. to midnight. Jonathan passed away suddenly on Oct. 9, a loss that was felt deeply across the community as he was loved by all.

The evening will feature a 50-50 raffle, music, refreshments and raffle prizes.

Born in Cork City, Ireland, Jonathan moved with his family to Quincy at a young age. He grew up in the Quincy neighborhood of Squantum and graduated from North Quincy High School in 2004.

In the years that followed Jonathan enlisted in the United States Marine Corps where he served a tour of duty in Afghanistan, was a carpenter out of Local 33 in Boston and eventually landed his dream job of joining the Quincy Fire Department.

Early in his firefighter career, Jonathan obtained a spot-on Ladder 2 out of Wollaston which responds to every fire in the City. When Jonathan was not at the firehouse or doing side work as a carpenter, he would spend his free time volunteering with the Quincy Fire Department.

Above all, the most important thing in Jonathan's life was his wife Alyson and their beloved young son, Nolan. Alyson and Nolan meant the world to Jonathan and they recently achieved their goal of moving back to Squantum to raise Nolan in the community he loved so much.

Community Leaders To Ring Bell For Salvation Army

Tuesday, Nov. 26 & Thursday, Dec. 5 Near John Adams Statue

The 23rd annual Community Leader Kettle to benefit The Salvation Army Quincy Corps will be held Tuesday, Nov. 26 and Thursday, Dec. 5 near Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The kettle will be set up in the Hancock-Adams Common near the John Adams Statue.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the Nov. 26 kettle and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the Dec. 5th kettle.

More than 40 civic and city leaders are volunteering their time to ring the bell at the community leader kettle. The kettle to benefit The Salvation Army was established in 1997 – 23 years ago – by the late Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., founder and longtime publisher of The Quincy Sun.

Mr. Bosworth, who coordinated the kettle for many years, passed away in February 2009. He was a longtime member of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board. For the last 11 years, Mr. Bosworth's son - Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth - has coordinated the community leader kettle. Robert Bosworth is also a member of The Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board.

Over the past 22 years, the kettle has raised more than $100,000. Last year's kettle raised $10,746 bringing the 22-year total to $100,021. That amount also includes several "Christmas In July" kettle standouts held in Quincy Center during some summer months that also supported the Quincy Salvation Army and its mission of helping the needy during the holiday season and year-round. The July kettles raised $9,249.

Capt. Amber Maynor and Capt. Kyle Maynor, officers of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps on Baxter Street in Quincy, said the Red Christmas Kettle campaign continues to be the strongest form of fundraising for the Salvation Army in Quincy. Donations are used year round to support the less fortunate. This year's kettle campaign goal is $135,000.

"Of this goal 82 cents of every dollar goes back to support our social services and programs and more as needs arise," Captain Amber Maynor said. "All of the services, programs, and meals we provide are free. We know that making ends meet can be difficult and that many times parents work multiple jobs, so we want to step in and stand in the gap to meet needs where we can."

Here is the line-up of volunteers manning the Community Leader kettle:

TUESDAY, NOV. 26

10 a.m.: Tim Cahill,

Quincy Chamber of Commerce president and state Sen. John Keenan.

Creative Cremation Urns Become A Treasured Part of Family History

The time following the death of a loved one is different for all of us, but the common thread we hear over and over again from the families we are privileged to serve is that the memories and legacy of their loved one live on in the choices we make as we memorialize the life of that person. For many of us, finding the "right" way to honor someone we have lost means taking a personal, creative approach to how we choose to remember that person.

Choosing a special urn can help us not only choose a final resting place for our loved one, but can also help us find a way to embody and cherish the spirit and memory of someone we held dear. And the myriad options available today in memorial urns can be part of that process. Here are some innovative ideas:

Companion Urns

Many couples choose to purchase adjoining graves so that they may be together eternally. This is often a statement and a tribute to the companionship and love that two people found in life and the conviction that that love is eternal. For those choosing cremation, this concept may be made even more personal with the selection of a companion urn, which is specially designed for two people. Companion urns are available in a wide variety of styles and materials and may have either two individual compartments or one common compartment in which the couple may be commingled.

Memorial Portrait Urns

These urns usually incorporate a picture of the deceased that may be commissioned by an artist who specializes in memorial renditions. The paint used may even be prepared with a portion of the deceased.

Living Garden Urns

A special way to memorialize a loved one who was an avid gardener is to collect and dry flowers she grew in her garden and have them incorporated or decoupage into the urn itself.

Music Box or Instrumental Urns

A lover of music can be memorialized by creating a custom music box urn which is loaded with all of the deceased favorite songs. Or if your loved one was a musician, a cherished instrument could be made into an urn as well.

Planter Urns

These urns may be biodegradable and serve as a symbol of the grieving process while providing comfort as well. The deceased is placed into the specially made urn and covered with soil. A small tree or bush can be planted in the opening, and then placed in a park or garden when it is big enough. Eventually the biodegradable material will disappear, providing a living remembrance of your loved one.

At Keohane, we know that each life is unique and that the number of options can seem daunting. The cremation experts at Keohane are committed to helping find out what is important to you and helping you explore those options so that your loved one is remembered for the unique life they lived. Please call us at 1-800-KEOHANE. We are here to help.

and stand in the gap to meet needs where we can.

The Salvation Army's founder, General William Booth, on Christmas Eve in 1910, was in poor health and edging towards the end of his life. He was unable to attend The Salvation Army's annual convention due to these reasons, so it was suggested that he send an encouraging telegram to those at the convention. General Booth decided to send a one-word message. He searched his mind and reviewed his years of ministry, looking for the one word that would summarize his life, the mission of the Army and encourage the others to continue. He sent the telegram and all it said was, "OTHERS." This is still our mission and ministry, to love and serve others.

We are looking for people who will join us in our mission and ministry by partnering with us to donate funds to our Red Christmas Kettles that will be out at 16 locations throughout Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham, and Braintree. We will be standing at Roche Brothers, Stop & Shop, Shaw's Hobby Lobby, Wal-Mart, Star Market, and the South Shore

If you are one who likes to shop, we also need toys and clothing items for our Christmas distribution. Individuals and businesses can sponsor a child or many children, committing to

Red Raiders Battle But Bow To Hopkinton, 14-7

By TOM JOYCE

The North Quincy High football team battled in spite of a few injuries and played a highly-competitive game last Friday night.

The Red Raiders were tough on defense in their home contest against Hopkinton. Ultimately, however, Hopkinton won the game 14-7 and the Red Raiders fell to 3-7 on the year.

"The kids came out, they played hard, pulled together and played one hell of a game," Red Raiders head coach Ryan Craig said.

The Red Raiders started the game off with the ball, but punted on the tenth play of their drive to pin Hopkinton on their own 16-yard line.

Hopkinton came close to scoring on their initial drive but fell just short. Showing off their competent passing game, a 40-yard completion got them over midfield. Hopkinton later converted on a rollout pass on fourth and four to get from the 19-yard line to the 10.

In close, Hopkinton tried running their way into the end zone after a short first down completion. However, Tyler Le stopped Hopkinton's running back at the two-yard line for a two-yard gain on fourth down, giving the Red Raiders the ball back with 1:34 left in the first quarter.

Hopkinton still ended up scoring, however. A false start penalty pushed the Red Raiders back a yard so while they picked up 10 yards on their first three plays of the drive, they were still a yard short of the first down. Their subsequent punt traveled 18 yards. On the first play of Hopkinton's new drive, they tossed a 29-yard touchdown pass. Hopkinton's extra point kick was good, putting them up 7-0 about a minute into the second quarter.

North Quincy got close to scoring territory on the following drive, but threw an interception, giving Hopkinton the ball back at their own 21-yard line. Luckily for the Red Raiders, their defense came up with another red zone stop. Although a 24-yard complete pass on a fake punt around midfield extended Hopkinton's drive, the Red Raiders killed it at the 13-yard line. On fourth and inches, their defensive line converged and got a stop on a quarterback sneak.

Raymond Chau also had a big play on defense in the first half, intercepting a Hopkinton pass for the Red Raiders with about 50 seconds remaining.

The Red Raiders had a hot start to the second half. Hopkinton fought to move the ball, but the Red Raiders stopped them in the red zone at the 18-yard line. Colm Geary forced an incompletion on a third down screen pass, bringing up fourth and nine. An overthrow on fourth down resulted in a turnover on downs.

Josh Jackson (6 carries, 21 yards) helped the Red Raiders to a first down on a 12-yard rush and a face-mask penalty on the rush gave the team an additional 15 yards. Hopkinton made another mistake, going off-sides to give the Red Raiders five free yards around midfield. From there, Matt Craig (5 carries, 69 yards) got his first carry of the game, throwing the opposition off guard. He broke loose for a 52-yard touchdown run, finding plenty of room on the left side of the field with Hopkinton's defense stacked up the middle. Thomas Murray's extra point kick was good, making it a 7-7 game with 5:41 left in the third quarter.

"We knew we were in a football game," coach Craig said of his team headed into the second half. "They're very disciplined over there. We thought we had a chance. We had all of the confidence in the world that we could win this game."

On the following drive, Hopkinton stalled after a pair of passes got them first downs. Matt Craig had a sack which brought up third and 14 and pressure from Colm Geary on third down forced an incomplete pass. Hopkinton punt on fourth down.

Still, neither team managed to score again in the third quarter. On the first play of the fourth quarter, the Red Raiders punted, giving Hopkinton possession at their own 36-yard line. Hopkinton capitalized immediately on a 64-yard touchdown run. This and their extra point kick gave them a 14-7 lead with 11:34 left in the game. This would end up being the final score of the game. The Red Raiders had a three and out and punted with 4:13 remaining in the contest. When Hopkinton got the ball back, they ran down the clock and ended the game. In the game, Coach Craig said a number of players stood out including running back/linebacker Matt Craig, running back and defensive back Liam Hines as well as linemen Jackson Zhao and Mike Levine, both of whom are captains.

"We've got a lot of guys who have been injured," he said. "We have a young team that's pulled together. These guys all gutted it out tonight and played their hearts out, so we almost had this one."

Now, the Red Raiders have one game left on their schedule: their annual Thanksgiving Day game against the Quincy Presidents at Veterans' Memorial Stadium (10 a.m. start time).

"This is our postseason now," Craig said. "Thanksgiving is a big game for the city. We'll be ready on Thursday (Nov. 28th)."

Quincy lost their final pre-Thanksgiving game last Friday night on the road to Weymouth, 35-7.

Quincy hydroplane racer Rachel Warnock was the recipient of The Bob and Pearl O'Connor Memorial Trophy for winning the New England Hydroplane Overall Points Championship for the 2019 season.

Racing in the highly competitive 15 horsepower A-Stock Hydroplane class, which is capable of almost 60 mph in the straightaways, Rachel bested over 50 other New England racers to bring the title home to Quincy. The championship is awarded to the driver who accumulates the most points in a single class of outboard racing on the Northeast Circuit. The weekend events are sanctioned by The Warnock, owner of Vedic Botanicals, an organic therapeutic company based in Quincy, is a third-generation racer who followed her father and grandfather into the sport. She started the season by placing herself in a deficit when she scored a fourth and a fifth at the season opener, The Ice Breaker Regatta in Standish, Maine back in May. Chasing the brother-sister duo of David and Erin Woodle from Littleton, Ma. who scored first and second respectively, Warnock knew she had her work cut out for her during the long summer racing season. "I didn't race very well in the opener, and it got me behind in the points," said Warnock. "Drivers in all eight classes are chasing the overall points title so I didn't do myself any favors by not getting to the podium that first race. I had good speed but I knew I needed to drive a cleaner line and try to stay out of traffic."

At the next event in June, The Milton, New Hampshire Summer Kick-off Regatta, Rachel showed that she certainly did have the speed as she hit the starting line with the leaders and quickly went to the front of the pack. Rachel finished the weekend with three heat wins out of four and two overall first place finishes to put her back in the hunt for the title.

Next up was The Race at The Ridge in July, a one day event in Pleasant Ridge, Maine where Rachel raced to a second place finish behind surprise winner Eli Campbell from Chester, N.H. who scored his first win in the A-Stock Class. Showing class and sportsmanship it was noted that Rachel was the first driver

Apaches Fall To Walpole In Bay State Super Bowl

Bow To Rebels, 26-12

It was a great day for youth football action as the best of the Bay State Conference visited Veterans' Memorial Stadium on Sunday and Quincy Youth Football and Cheerleading "QYFCA" volunteers stepped up and all worked hard to represent QYFCA and make the day a huge success.

The North Quincy Apaches gave the Walpole Rebels all they could handle in another hard fought game, but ended up on the wrong end of the 26-12 final score.

After a touchdown run by Charlie Baker was called back on a penalty, the Apaches reached the end zone when Ben Hudach raced 8 yards to give North the early lead. In the second quarter, Walpole countered with a touchdown and kicked for the extra points for an 8-6 advantage over North. With minutes to go in the first half, Walpole added to their lead and took a 14-6 lead into the locker room at halftime.

The Rebels got the ball to open the second half and drove downfield for another TD increasing their lead, 20-6. But, as they have done all year, the Apaches never quit, and responded with a strong drive capped off by a 5-yard touchdown by Baker to cut into the lead, and bring North within a touchdown of tying the game, 20-12. Late in the game, North's offense was again moving the ball well, before a costly turnover gave the ball back to the Rebels with under 2 minutes to play. The Rebels scored one final time to seal the victory and end the 2019 Bay State Super Bowl.

It was an unbelievable season for North Quincy, as they earned the first ever appearance by a Quincy youth football team in the Bay State Super Bowl. Working hard and playing great football all season for North were: Charlie Ambroult, Ash Harris, Ben Walinjom, Simone Trainor, Noel Sancho, Emmet Walsh, Jialin Yu, Manny Halpin, Domenic Gonzales, David Connelly, Truet Bramlet, Renzo Santangelo, Michael Campbell, Ben Hudach, Dan Hudach, Paul Glynn, Will Conley, Sean Connolly, Chace Vey, Noah Baker, Enhea Panariti, Marcus MacDonald, Tucker MacDonald, Michael Phinney, Brody Baker, Alan Guan, Brian Wolowicz, Nathan Sampson (injured) and Charlie Baker.

The Apaches were coached by Justin Thorley, Pat MacDonald and Head Coach, Tim Baker.

North Quincy's sidelines were spirited and upbeat all season thanks to Apaches' cheerleaders: Elle Blauhut, Emma Boylan, Brighid Burke, Emma Crammond, Grace Flaherty, Annie Hayes, Ellie Manning, Jade Manning, Hadley McDermott, Kylie McDonald, Colby McIntosh, Margaret O'Brien, Casey O'Connell and Jacqueline Quinlin. Coaching North's cheerleaders were Kelly Stanton, Jamie Nista, Bridget Capone and Julianna Currie.

In other Super Bowl action, in grade 5, it was Wellesley topping Needham 14-0. In the 6th grade bowl game Tyler Koski and Colin Hoffman led Milton to a big upset over the Framingham Flyers, 26-18. Natick took the 7th grade game, 26-12.

Heading into the off-season, the future for Quincy Youth Football and Cheer looks bright, and Coaches, players and Cheerleaders are already excited about the upcoming 2020 season. Be sure to check the Quincy Youth Football and Cheerleading website for 2020 registration details coming this spring at QYFCA.COM to congratulate Campbell at the inspection scales after the race. "Of course I wanted to win but I was also happy for Eli. That was his first win in the A class after coming out of the Junior Division a couple of years ago." Said the gracious Warnock after the race.

By September it was back to Standish, Maine at The Summer's End Regatta where it was quite a turnaround for Rachel as she finished second on Saturday behind David Woodle and first on Sunday. This impressive showing putting her right with the points leaders going into the season closer.

At the last race of the year, The Kingston Fall Classic in Kingston, N.H., there were three drivers in serious contention for the Over-all New England Points Title. Candia, New Hampshire's Bob Cronin, a past APBA National Champion was leading the OSY-400 class, Rachel was besting the A-Stocks and Bob Howe from Richmond, Maine led The B-Stock Class. All were within a few points of each other.

Under a beautiful fall backdrop, Rachel now proved to those in attendance at Kingston that she was not fooling around as she put the hammer down and smoked the field in two straight heats for the overall win on Saturday, Sept. 21 and banked those coveted 400 points. Meanwhile Cronin could manage only a third in the OSY-400 race and Bob Howe, who needed to run the table, got second in the B-Stock race.

On Sunday, Sept. 22, Cronin managed to score a second place in the OSY-400 race putting him ahead by 235 points meaning Rachel needed to get first or second in the A-Stock race to win the title.

At the start of heat one, Erin Woodle jumped to the front and held the lead as Warnock found herself battling traffic mid pack. As the laps counted down, with her teammates, neighbors and even a Quincy city councillor screaming from the beach, Warnock systematically drove her way through the field and finished second behind Woodle. In heat two Woodle and

Warnock put on a show for the crowd as they fought deck to deck for two laps until Warnock pulled ahead to secure the heat win. This first place finish gave Warnock a second place overall for the race which was good enough to wrap up her first New England points title. Pulling into the pits after heat two, amid the cheers of the crowd, Rachel was yanked from her hull, lifted overhead and carried to the inspection area by teammate Mike Akerstrom as the rest of her stablemates from The Parke Avenue Speedboat Club in Squantum lifted the boat onto the inspection scales.

Clearing inspection a few minutes later, as the champagne corks were popping, Warnock was asked what it was like to battle all season and have the points title come down to one race. "It was intense!" Stated Warnock, "after my bad start at the beginning of the year I just tried to focus on one race at a time and it all worked out". And that is why in racing, you never quit.

Fair Saturday Quincy: New Addition To City's Holiday Celebration Weekend

The City of Quincy has a long tradition of ushering in the winter holiday season with a series of special events on the weekend after Thanksgiving. On this last year of the current decade, the city's line-up of holiday festivities will include an exciting global newcomer, Fair Saturday.

Fair Saturday is an innovative cultural festival celebrating arts and culture in support of social issues and the organizations that help tackle them. Taking place on the Saturday after Black Friday every year, Fair Saturday aims to create a positive cultural and social impact in the communities where it takes place. Originating in Bilbao, Spain in 2014, the Fair Saturday's emphasis upon local arts and culture as agent for positive social change has propelled its rapid rise around the world. In 2018 more than 600 events occurred in over 100 cities worldwide. Jordi Albareda, founder of Fair Saturday, stated "It is a day to change the world through arts and culture."

For Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, the mission of Fair Saturday was a natural fit with the spirit of the city's holiday celebrations.

"Thanksgiving weekend is a time of celebration in the City of Quincy," Koch said. "Bringing the intention of Fair Saturday to our city on that Saturday offers families a day to appreciate new arts and cultural events and contribute to a variety of local charities in the process. What a wonderful intention at the start of the holiday season."

The integration of Fair Saturday into Quincy's holiday festivities gives both local and south shore residents the opportunity to have a truly "hometown" holiday experience at the start of a busy holiday season.

The weekend kicks off with the tree lighting on the Hancock-Adams Common on Friday from 5-7 p.m. On Saturday, Santa parachutes in for a visit at Pageant Field at noon, and Fair Saturday's arts and culture events kick off at 11 a.m. run through the evening hours at various locations in and around Quincy Center.

The weekend caps off with the 67th annual Christmas Parade along Hancock Street on Sunday from 12:30-3:30 p.m.

This year, Quincy is being recognized by the Fair Saturday Foundation as the first official U.S. city to partner with and to participate in the international arts and cultural movement. As a part of that recognition, a video of the Quincy Choral Society singing a traditional song from the Basque region of Spain will be projected in the 10,000 seat Bilbao Arena in Bilbao Spain to kick off the global Fair Saturday movement for 2019.

On this side of the Atlantic, the City of Quincy and six local arts and culture organizations will present 14 events, involving over 100 artists and performers at six different venues in and around Quincy Center between 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 30th.

For more information about the Fair Saturday movement and the events taking place during Fair Saturday Quincy 2019, visit the Fair Saturday web page at www.fairsaturday.org and click on the "Quincy" link. You can also visit the Atrium at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St. in Quincy, home-base for Fair Saturday 2019, where you can find flyers and information about the events.

Team Barlow Strong, Northwestern Develop Pitching Machine

Team Barlow Strong announces that they have partnered with researchers at Northwestern University to develop an adaptive baseball pitching machine.

Team Barlow Strong is named after dedicated business man and family man, Bob Barlow. Among other things, Bob was a true American patriot, having served in the Iraqi war. After leaving the military, Bob suffered a devastating spinal injury during a family vacation, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down. But did this not slow him down.

Showing his strength and determination, Bob, along with his wife Stacie and two children, Jake and Reese, continued with his life, albeit with necessary adaptations.

One of these adaptations deals with his son. Jake loves baseball, and Bob is determined to help his son practice and succeed in this sport. But to be able to do this, Bob needs a machine that is adapted specifically to his unique condition and needs.

Enter Northwestern University. Together, Team Barlow Strong and Northwestern University are working to develop this project. It aims to take an off-the-shelf pitching machine and adapt it so that Bob can continue to do what he loves - spending time with his son. To accomplish this, the adaptive baseball machine must:

- Be independently operated.
- Have multi-ball storage capability.
- Allow for different pitching speeds.

- Enable ease of mobility with a pressure-based switch.
- Allow for quick assembly.

Together, Team Barlow Strong and Northwestern University are working tirelessly on creating the prototype that can enable the adaptive baseball pitching machine to come to fruition.

For more information about Team Barlow Strong, to send messages, or simply to stay aware of progress, visit their Facebook page at TeamBarlowStrong.

O'Donnell: Strong Lending Numbers Continue In October

Register of Deeds William O'Donnell reports lending activity, fueled by continued low interest rates, showed significant increases during October 2019.

"As we saw during the third quarter 2019, significant increases year over were seen with lending activity in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said. "A total of 3,373 mortgages were recorded in October, a significant 62% increase compared to October 2018. Also, the total amount of money borrowed against Norfolk County properties during the month was $1.9 billion, a 106% increase compared to the previous year. While this particular figure was impacted by two commercial loans of $100 million and $160 million recorded against Franklin and Brantree properties respectively, the statistics also show that positive trend lines relative to borrowing in the county continue unabated. Consumers are clearly taking advantage of low interest rates to purchase big ticket items and pay for large capital expenses."

During October, the number of county real estate transactions, both residential and commercial, recorded was 3,373, a 5% increase year over year. Buyers also saw encouraging signs as the average real estate sales price, again both residential and commercial, fell 6% to $878,369. Total dollar real estate sales for the month was $866 million, a 2% decrease from the previous year. "These figures," O'Donnell noted, "bear watching as they may portend a real estate inventory increase and more options for prospective Norfolk County homeowners."

Norfolk County homeowners continued to show they are very familiar with the benefits of the Homestead Act. A total of 1,042 Homesteads were recorded during the month of October, a 2% increase compared to October 2018. Register O'Donnell reiterated the importance of having a Homestead. "A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I urge Norfolk County residents to consider this important consumer protection tool."

One surprise seen during October was a small increase in the number of foreclosure deeds recorded countywide. A total of 17 foreclosure deeds were recorded compared to 14 during the same timeframe in 2018. This bit of bad news was offset by a 28% decrease in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgages, the first step in the foreclosure process, recorded during the month.

"The reduction in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings in October was certainly encouraging," O'Donnell said. "With that said, we want any homeowner facing challenges paying their mortgage to know help is available. The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has partnered with Quincy Community Action Programs, 617-479-8181 x376 and NeighborWorks Housing Solutions, 508-587-0950 to help any homeowner who

Patrick McDermott Democratic Candidate For County Sheriff

Surrounded by over 250 supporters from around Norfolk County, Patrick McDermott officially launched his campaign for Norfolk County Sheriff Nov. 13th at the Quincy of Sons of Italy.

McDermott, a Quincy Democrat who has served as Norfolk County Register of Probate since 2003, was also presented with an endorsement from the County Corrections Officers Association (CCOA), the union representing the non-supervisory corrections officers at the county jail, that evening.

"I am running to be your Sheriff because I believe that public safety begins in the community, and that the sheriff's office can play a greater role in supporting local law enforcement efforts throughout Norfolk County," said McDermott. "We need to better address the issues, like addiction, homelessness and education, to stop the cycle before people end up serving time in the county system. And if they are incarcerated, we must have the innovative, treatment programs in place so that once they have served their time, they have the tools and resources to re-enter our communities and stay out of trouble," said McDermott as he addressed his family and friends; adding, "For those who have committed a crime, it is important that the county jail run effectively, efficiently, allowing prisoners to serve their sentences while keeping the surrounding communities and the employees of the jail safe."

McDermott added, "As an attorney and Norfolk County Register of Probate for the past 16 years, I believe I bring a unique combination of legal and public service experience, as well as a knowledge of Norfolk County. That experience will allow me to bring a level of expertise to effectively expand the role of the Sheriff's office in order to institute better community prevention programs to keep people out of jail, reduce recidivism and ensure those who have been convicted serve their time."

Just before making his official announcement, McDermott was presented with a letter of endorsement from the CCOA. In their letter, Gerald DeAngelis, the chairman of CCOA/NEPBA 575 stated, "Your vision on security and public safety within the Norfolk Sheriff's Office and the Correctional Facilities has given us great assurance in your ability to lead us forward. We believe your election to become the next Sheriff of Norfolk

Bridson is the McKinney-Vento coordinator and foster care point of contact for the Quincy Public Schools. As the McKinney-Vento Homeless Liaison for the Quincy Public School systems, Leslie has worked tirelessly as an advocate for all unaccompanied youth, an unflagging guide for those who are at risk, and a loving presence for those who simply need an ear to listen and shoulder upon which to lean. She has truly served as an inspiration.

Bridson will be honored for her leadership and for her continued and faithful service to youth of Quincy.

The public is welcome to attend the service which will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 26 at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage document. An additional option available is to contact the Massachusetts Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (CARD) at 617-727-8400.

"A robust eastern Massachusetts economy continues to propel the Norfolk County real estate market in a positive direction," O'Donnell said. "Strong lending activity, also fueled by low interest rates, and an uptick in real estate sales shows Norfolk County homeowners are confident about the current state of the economy and their finances. Another possible factor to consider could be concern that a possible recession, forecast by some economic watchdogs, could mean it is more advantageous to borrow now instead of in calendar year 2020."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is located at 649 High St. in Dedham. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

is another reason to stay here and bring your families here. This is something that shows Quincy is willing to take care of all the children in the city."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci welcomed the opportunity to bring students back to the district for their education.

"For me, any proposal that brings our students back into the district to be educated is a home run," he said. "You had me at hello with this and I am fully supportive of it."

Mahoney, who is the chairwoman of the council's education committee, said she supported the idea of opening a special education center but could not vote in favor of it Monday because plans for the site are still being put together. She was also concerned the city's projected cost savings might not come to fruition and that the council did not hold a public hearing before the vote.

"They are rushing the purchase of a building without a program," Mahoney said following the meeting.

"Many of the students that we work with are not typically students that are able to participate in some of our afterschool activities," she said. "To have beyond-the-bell activities that are absolutely tailored to this particular group of students...I think is really wonderful."

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, who is the chairman of the council's finance committee, called the proposal innovative and forward looking.

"This is a truly innovative project. This is forward looking from an education perspective," he said. "This

OBITUARIES

Mark L. Hodgkins, 57

A funeral service for Mark L. "The Champion" Hodgkins, 57, of Abington, formerly of Scituate, a beloved Special Olympics athlete whose heart, soul and personality were just a little bit bigger than the rest of ours, was held Nov. 16 in First Trinitarian Congregational Church, Scituate.

Mr. Hodgkins died Nov. 10 following recent health complications and setbacks.

Raised in Scituate, he graduated from Scituate High School in 1982. He was a parishioner at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church of Scituate, where his late father, the Rev. George A. Hodgkins, served as long-time pastor. "The Champ," as he was affectionately known, participated in the Massachusetts Special Olympics for more than 40 years as a member of the Scituate Team, excelling in the 400m fast walk over the years, and more recently competing in the corn hole toss.

Mr. Hodgkins had a deep appreciation for music of all genres, and enjoyed listening to Elvis Presley, The Beatles, Mozart, Beethoven and especially Peter, Paul and Mary. He also enjoyed playing the keyboard and the "air guitar."

Mr. Hodgkins was loved by his nurses and caregivers for his infectious smile, sense of humor and for the sparkle in his eyes that would light up the room.

Beloved son of Constance F. "Connie" (Forrest) Hodgkins of Quincy and the late Rev. George A. Hodgkins, who died in 2004. Dear brother of Don Hodgkins and his wife Faith of Wakefield, Carol Leonard and her husband Paul of Quincy, Wendie

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) While it seems that chaos is taking over, you get everything back to normal, even if it means being more than a little assertive with some people. Expect to hear more job-related news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect to be able to move ahead with your workplace plans now that you have a good idea of what you might have to face. You also can anticipate a welcome change on the home front.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A quieter period settles in, giving you a chance to catch your breath, as well as allowing for more time to handle some important family matters. The arts dominate this weekend. Enjoy them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The frustrations of last week have pretty much played themselves out. You should find things going more smoothly, especially with those all-important personal matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Once again, you find a creative way to resolve a pesky problem in short order. However, a matter involving a possible breach of confidence might need a bit more time to check out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reuniting with an old friend could lead to the sharing of some great new experiences. But be careful you don't find yourself once again being super-critical or overly judgmental.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be seeing some positive results following your move toward repairing that unraveling relationship. There might be some setbacks, but staying with it ultimately pays off.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Encouraging a friendlier environment in the home could go a long way to help dissipate anger and resolve problems, especially those affecting children. It won't be easy, but you can do it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent act of kindness is beginning to show some unexpected (but very welcome) results. On another note, expect to hear more about a possible move to another locale.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The good news is that the sure-footed Goat can rely on his or her skill to get around obstacles in the workplace. The not-so-good news is that new impediments could turn up later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A change of pace is welcome but also confusing. Before you make decisions one way or another, be sure you know precisely what it is you're being asked to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Don't fret if you don't get the gratitude you think you're owed for doing a nice thing for someone. There might be a good reason for that. In any event, what's important is that you did it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of making the sort of wise decisions that ultimately shed new light on dark situations.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Taylor Swift, who has won 295 major music awards, including 10 Grammys, is putting in a serious bid to win an Oscar. While visiting "Cats" creator Andrew Lloyd Webber, he played her a new melody he'd written for the film "Cats." Before the afternoon was over, Swift and Lloyd Webber had written "Beautiful Ghosts" for "Cats." The song is sung first by Francesca Hayward, then is reprised by Dame Judy Dench and finally sung over the closing credits by Swift. It's the only original song written for the film and will qualify as a best-song nominee for Taylor and Lord Andrew. Swift admits she studied for her big role as Bombalurina by going to cat school, where they watched film of cats walking, and by studying her own three cats, Meredith Grey, Olivia Benson and Benjamin Button.

With the honeymoon over, Justin Bieber is easing into acting by lending his voice to the title role of "Cupid" in an upcoming animated film being produced by his manager, Scooter Braun. Rachel Weisz, an Oscar-winner for "The Constant Gardener" (2005) and a nominee this year for "The Favourite," is taking on the difficult job of playing two-time Oscar-winning actress and legend Elizabeth Taylor. Instead of following her films and marriages, the film chronicles her beginnings as an HIV/AIDS activist that began after the 1985 death of her friend Rock Hudson, who died in 1985 from AIDS. Weisz is married to the current James Bond, Daniel Craig.

To prepare for battle with new streaming services such as Disney, HBO Max, Amazon Prime, Hulu and Apple, Netflix has canceled a slew of established shows. Among the longest running were "Orange Is the New Black" (seven seasons), "House of Cards" (six seasons), "Fuller House" and "Lucifer" (five seasons each), "The Ranch," "GLOW" and "The Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt" (four seasons each) and three-season shows "A Series of Unfortunate Events," "One Day at a Time," "Santa Clarita Diet," "Designated Survivor" and "Daredevil." In all, 42 shows were canceled...war is hell!

Shooting begins in London in January on "The Batman," with Robert Pattinson in the title role. He'll be aided and abetted by Zoe Kravitz as Batwoman, Tony and Emmy winner Jeffrey Wright as Commissioner Gordon and Paul Dano as The Riddler. The slender Pattinson is either going to have to become a gym rat or wear store-bought muscles to fill out that famous suit!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Metallic Postcard --- Postcards are among the most popular inexpensive collectibles today, perhaps because they are easy to find. But they require time and searching to create a special collection. Postcards are wanted for the postmark, the stamp, the message or the picture on the front, and they can be framed and hung or displayed in scrapbooks.

Although an English postcard was mailed as early as 1840, the first U.S. postcard wasn't printed until 1873. The earliest picture postcards mailed in the U.S. probably were cards sold at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893. A printed stamp was used on early postal cards by the U.S. Post Office. A rectangular stamp was glued onto a souvenir postage card, bought and mailed by tourists. The required postage changed 21 times between 1872 and 2000, going from 1 cent to 21 cents. Today it is 35 cents.

Collectors also can date a card from its design. The "divided back" era began in 1907. "Linen" cards that had textured paper for better color printing were popular from 1931 to 1959. "Chrome" era postcards featuring Kodachrome photographs started in 1939. The craze for collecting postcards began in 1946, and there were clubs, stores, sales and research for collectors buying postcards.

This unusual card, featuring the side of an attached metal turkey, seems great for a Thanksgiving message, but the raised turkey would not allow it to go in the mail. It's part of a group of cards that have strange attached or moving parts known as "mechanicals." It also has a divided back, suggesting a date as early as 1907. The postcard has an old price tag of $20.

Q: I bought a green

Thanksgiving plate at an auction and am curious to see its value. A colonial couple is pictured on the front, and underneath it says: "Speak for yourself, John." There are four other scenes around the border. The back of the platter has a picture of pilgrims, and underneath it says: "Pilgrim Exiles" and "Colonial Times by Crown Ducal, England." Can you help?

A: Crown Ducal is used on some pieces of porcelain made by A.G. Richardson and Co., Ltd., of Tunstall and Cobridge, England, beginning in 1916. The Colonial Times series was made in the early 1930s. It includes 12 different designs and was made in several colors, including blue, brown, green, mulberry and pink. Plates were made with scalloped or smooth edges. A square plate also was made. Colonial Times plates sell for $25 to $50.

CURRENT PRICES

Egg beater, tin and steel, wood handle, side gear drive, teeth and crimp, Holt's, 1899, 10 3/4 x 3 inches, $75. Mechanical postcard, Thanksgiving greeting, opens into booklet, Indian maiden holding turkey, Germany, 1913, $95. Tin, Thanksgiving, round, orange and black, pilgrim girl holding basket, pumpkins and turkeys, 1920s, 1 3/4 x 3 3/4 inches, $125.

TIP: Use your lace and lace-trimmed tablecloths. It is more damaging to let the linens get dusty than it is to wash them. If you're really worried about stains, don't serve red wine or cranberries.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was 19th-century German poet Johann Peter Eckermann who made the following sage observation: "Invention requires an excited mind; execution, a calm one."

* Those who study such things say that if you want to know if someone is likely to keep your secrets, you should look at their birth order in the family. First-born children tend to be better at keeping secrets than kids born later.

* According to biologists, young giraffes have been known to grow up to half an inch per hour.

* You might be surprised to learn that in addition to being the father of our country, George Washington was quite a successful purveyor of alcohol. According to the U.S. Distilled Spirits Council, he operated one of the largest whiskey distilleries in early America, producing 11,000 gallons in 1799.

* You may be familiar with the famous scene from Shakespeare's "Hamlet," in which the title character picks up the skull of an erstwhile acquaintance and declares, "Alas, poor Yorick!" It's an icon of the stage -- and the screen, with more than 50 known film versions of the play. Of course, it's also been published too many times to count, and in too many different formats. One in particular stands out, though; in 2009, Czech bookbinders and artists Jan and Jarmila Soboda created their own unique edition. It's a tiny script tucked inside a plastic skull housed in a small metal casket with a hinged lid.

* If you're planning a holiday in Paris this year, keep in mind that in that city it's against the law to spin a top on a sidewalk.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* Frozen grapes make great ice cubes for white wine and punch. They are tasty straight out of the freezer, too.

* Want to keep certain rooms off limits to wandering little ones? If you slip a baby sock over a door-knob, then secure it with a heavy-duty rubber band, it will keep toddlers out! -- E.R. in Ohio

* You might be tempted to reserve your silver flatware for special occasion use, but it can be used daily. If you do so, it will be less likely to tarnish and require special cleaning and polishing. Hand wash gently -- never put silver in the dishwasher -- and store in drawers lined with a tarnish proof cloth for best results.

* Substitute cottage cheese for sour cream in dips by running it through a blender until smooth. It's lower in calories and higher in protein than sour cream.

* "If you eat one meal out in a restaurant each day, let it be lunch. The prices are typically lower, and the portions are not really smaller. It'll keep you going all day, and you can have a light meal or snack in the evening." -- S.L. in Nevada

* Self-care tip: It's a great idea to set aside a bit of time before bed to think about your goals for the future or to review the successes and lessons learned of the day -- or just to not think at all. Double down on the me-time by taking the time to hydrate your skin with some lotion.

Meteorologist Jackie Layer Talks Weather With Beechwood Knoll Students

Meteorologist Jackie Layer, a member of the Boston 7News Weather team, recently visited third graders at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

This was the second consecutive year that Layer visited Beechwood for a presentation on weather. The third grade students are learning all about weather, and Layer was quite impressed with their knowledge.

Jackie focused on hurricanes and gave the kids a virtual tour of the Channel 7 News Station in Boston. The third graders especially enjoyed learning about the green screen.

Jackie's visit marked the fifth year in a row that a meteorologist has visited the Beechwood Knoll School. The school is grateful for her appearance and the time she shared with the students.

METEOROLOGIST JACKIE LAYER holds the blue and white Beechwood Knoll School sweatshirt that students presented her as a token of their appreciation for visiting their school and discussing the weather. The students have been studying weather and shared their knowledge with the member of the Boston 7News Weather team.
